Montana Actors' Theatre, based in Havre (pop. 9,204), produces "bold, authentic theater reflecting the spirit of Montana" -- miles from Manhattan, yet the cast members of "The Harvest" are right at home at NYC's Chain Theatre. Set in a farmhouse living room, the play focuses on a tired mother and six squabbling siblings as they reunite amidst family and financial struggles. Jason Pyette's sharp writing effectively develops the characters and tells an engaging story with pathos and humor. It's delivered convincingly by the cast, especially Pam Veis (stoic matriarch), Tylyn Turner, (lone daughter), and Samantha Pollington (local girlfriend). 4 out of 5 stars. Presented in partnership with the Manhattan Repertory Theatre at the Chain Theatre through Nov. 22; mtactors.com. Review by Ryan Kinkade.
